A sculpture titled "Solidarity" by Mary Ann Chubb was commissioned by Men's Second Chance Living donor Kathy Carson. "To me, it's a permanent reminder of men working together and giving each other a hand. Two men with hands clasped together are stronger than one," Carson said.

The nonprofit Men's Second Chance Living and The Community Library are partnering to present "A Life in Recovery," a talk by Benjamin Seymour, at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 30, at the library in Ketchum.

Seymour has more than 23 years of experience in behavioral health care and is a nationally recognized interventionist, consultant, counselor, author and public speaker. He has served as the founder and CEO of several health care companies in the U.S. and is well versed in working with health care organizations in a consultative capacity.

Seymour is an adjunct professor at the Idaho College of Osteopathic Medicine in Meridian and specializes in working with impaired physicians, executives, nurses, attorneys and other professionals.

September is National Recovery Month, a time to celebrate the progress that those in recovery from substance use disorder have made and continue to make, the organizations stated in a press release. Recovery Month celebrates communities, families, organizations and providers who have given support and dedication to those in recovery, they said.
